I am very happy that this year, after a 2-year gap, the annual Fresh Market B2B Meeting and Trade Show will be held in person again on September 22.

ARTUR STASIAK
CEO FRESH MARKET & KJOW

Dear All,

Fresh Market is for 14 years the most important branch event in Poland, where suppliers of fresh fruits, vegetables, and flowers meet and talk directly with buyers of the largest retail chains from the Central and Western Europe. That is even more essential this year, as the upcoming season will be very unpredictable, both for purchasing and sales planning. Galloping inflation, rising energy prices, the sounds of war across the Ukrainian border will all have a strong impact on the market.

The solution to these times for companies is diversification of both customers and suppliers. Companies that operate in a flexible way, with a wide range of business contacts, became the quickest to adapt to rapid market changes, respond, and profit appropriately. Companies with a few contacts will no longer have such comfort, and this season may turn out to be extremely tough for them.

The following catalog and the event we organize serve the purpose of giving every buyer access to a huge group of reliable suppliers, while in turn the suppliers have the opportunity to establish direct in-person contacts with quality buyers. We wish you to take full benefit of these opportunities and great experience!

Fresh Market Team

Effective establishment of business contacts in the FMCG industry.

Warsaw, Poland

FRESH MARKET B2B meetings & Trade show

– the most important event in the fresh fruits and vegetables industry in Central Europe is back on site again. Fresh Market annually gathers more than 350 company representatives. Participants will include market leaders from different countries, including producers and importers as well as distributors of fresh fruits, vegetables and flowers.

After a very tough two years for the entire fresh fruit & vegetable market and a break due to the Covid-19 pandemic, we are very happy to be back with 16th edition and meet you face to face again. On September 22, 2022 representatives of the largest producers, retail chains and stores will gather in the luxurious interiors of MCC Mazurkas Conference Centre & Hotel in near Warsaw. This is an event you cannot miss!

BACK IN REAL LIFE!

One day, many opportunities

Fresh Market B2B Meeting has been held every year for 14 years. The first event took place in 2008 in Poland and from the beginning it has become an excellent meeting place for fresh produce companies. That is why we know how to do it effectively. When you come to Fresh Market you will surely notice that this event is much different from other trade fairs or industry meetings. Why? Because the event formula has been developed based on the needs of buyers and suppliers of fruit, vegetables and flowers.

- ◆ hold face-to-face meetings with producers and retailers from Poland and Central Europe
- ◆ talk to hundreds of companies, exchange business cards, see the latest innovative products
- ◆ promote your products on stand, video presentation and banners

How the global floriculture industry is emerging from the pandemic

FloraCulture International had a conversation with Sylvie Mamias, Secretary General of Union Fleurs – the International Flower Trade Association, to take stock of the past two years and look at what challenges and opportunities lie ahead for the international floriculture value chain.

Union Fleurs is the international umbrella organisation representing and promoting the interests of national associations and companies active in the floricultural trade, including cut flowers, cut foliage and potted plants. Union Fleurs was founded in 1959 in Brussels and now has members in 20 countries worldwide, spanning Europe, Africa, Middle-East, South and North America, and Asia.

FCI: We are now two years from the start of the Covid-19 pandemic, which caused massive disruption to the global floriculture industry. Where are we now, and what have been Union Fleurs' major achievements in helping the sector navigate the rocky waters of this global health crisis?

Sylvie Mamias: "The international floriculture industry has been an outstanding example of a highly integrated global supply chain making a very significant socio-economic contribution to developed and developing economies worldwide.

Increased globalisation has driven greater efficiency in the supply chain. It has stimulated efforts across the floriculture industry to ensure businesses are socially and environmentally responsible.

But it is precisely because of this intrinsic interdependence that this industry suffered during the worldwide escalation of the Covid-19 pandemic. The build-up to the first peak of the pandemic and the consequent strict lockdown measures implemented across the globe triggered an unprecedented and massive 'domino effect' throughout the floriculture supply chain.

However, after the initial shock, the floriculture industry demonstrated its resilience with a steady upturn in sales throughout 2020 and 2021. This uptake was thanks to consumers rediscovering the importance of having flowers and plants in their daily lives. Although some segments of the industry, particularly hospitality and events, have continued to suffer due to restrictions on public attendance adopted in most countries.

Sylvie Mamias says: "Further educating consumers on the dynamics of the floriculture supply chain has its value as it helps them make informed choices. But it is not to say that value-based or 'moral' assumptions should drive the market." Photo: Saskia Vanderstichele.

During the initial stages of the pandemic, Union Fleurs' activities focused on three main strategic areas. Firstly, to give visibility to governments and policymakers on the specific challenges the ornamental supply chain was having to deal with in its globality due to the implementation of lockdown measures and the sudden closure of supply chain linkages and sales outlets. Secondly, to stimulate cooperation across the representative organisations of the supply chain to work together; and thirdly, to promote the sense of wellbeing that floriculture products can bring to a society spending a lot of time in lockdown.

Elmgrove Farm is the fifth largest daffodil farm in the country

“I like to boast that my farm is the fifth largest daffodil farm in the country” laughs Darragh McCullough. He knows that this isn’t much of a boast, since there are only five commercial daffodil growers in Ireland. In fact, daffodils are the only cut flower that Ireland exports, making McCullough’s farm very unusual in a country dominated by beef and dairy production.

Darragh
McCullough

Director
Elmgrove Farm

“Ireland is famous for being green, and that’s because it’s cool and wet,” explains McCullough.

“Average rainfall in Ireland is about 1200mm, and temperatures don’t vary much from 7-14C from winter to summer. That’s ideal for growing grass but not great if you want to grow disease free crops like outdoor flowers.”

The climate isn’t the only challenge. As Europe’s most westerly island, the soils are stoney, and often shallow and peaty.

But Elmgrove Farm, which has been farmed by three generations of McCulloughs, is located on Ireland’s east coast just 40 minutes north of Dublin city centre, which gives it a number of key advantages.

“The east coast gets less than half the amount of rainfall compared to the west coast, and every hectare we farm is easily ploughable,” says McCullough.

“It’s not as good as the sandy soils in the Netherlands, or the stone free soils I’ve seen in eastern Poland, but we can make it work.”

MMcCullough's grandfather, Pat, first tried growing gladiola for a trader in a local town.

"But my dad says he never got paid, so he focused instead on dairying and cereals. My dad, Eamon built up an onion enterprise to the point where he was the largest onion grower in Ireland.,,"

"But again, with just 60Ha, this wasn't that big a boast when compared with the international competition," he said.

It was that international competition that gradually made it difficult for Elmgrove Farm to stay profitable in onions.

"We were struggling to compete with the Dutch and Kiwi imports that had flawless skin quality," claims McCullough.

However, the McCulloughs had a Plan B. During the 1990s they started looking at adding a daffodil enterprise because they already had so much of the machinery and soil types required.

"Daffodils and onions are both basically bulb crops, so we could use practically all the same planting, harvesting, grading and drying equipment," he says.

Initially, the crop was only being grown for the value of the daffodil bulbs.

"During the 1990s bulb prices were quite strong so on paper it looked like we could make a profit on the bulbs alone."

"This was also a time before the free movement of labour around the EU, so we didn't have access to a pool of labour to hand-pick the flowers. ,,"

„And to be honest, I don't think my dad wanted the hassle of having to deal with seasonal workers that often had no English, accommodation or loyalty to the business," says McCullough.

However, when the business was under pressure to survive in 2005, Darragh decided to give daffodil flower picking a serious chance.

"It's a bit embarrassing really. One of the guys who worked on the farm milking cows tried picking some daffodils to pay for his wedding. It was only when I saw how many people stopped at the farm gate to buy them that I realised that there might be something to be made from flower picking.,,"

"At the same time, Eastern Europeans from Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, Estonia and Slovakia started to arrive in Ireland looking for work."

"We installed a few caravans on the farm to provide temporary accommodation, and I looked to see if there was any supermarket that we could supply daffodils into.,,"

"Lidl was the first supermarket that we started with, and we still supply them today. I remember how stressed out we were trying to pack out eight pallets in one week. Now we pack out eight pallets a day!" grins McCullough.

The business has grown a lot since then, with close to 40Ha of daffodils grown, along with small areas of foliage and other cut flowers such as gladiola, sunflower and lily.

"The business has done a couple of u-turns over the years when you think about it. We got out of growing onions because we couldn't cope with the international competition. Instead, we focused on building up our daffodil business to supply Irish supermarkets and florists."

Packaging and machinery - technology

Increasing Efficiencies in Iceberg Packaging

To meet demands of growers across the market to reduce labour, enable faster packaging speeds and lower maintenance costs when wrapping Iceberg.

Redpack
PACKAGING MACHINERY

Redpack have been working closely with growers across the market to come up with a solution that wraps Iceberg in a tight pack that retains the required shelf life. Redpack have developed a machine called the NTS-BMI which has been designed and manufactured with features that optimize the packing of Iceberg which includes gentle handling of the product to minimize damage to the Lettuce.

“There are good reasons to pack products”

The machine has a unique V – Shape infeed which holds the products and prevents it from rolling around, something that is especially critical while running at fast wrapping speeds and on field rigs. It also has an overhead paddle system which stabilizes the product at transfer to ensure correct product placement onto the film.

The Redpack NTS-BMI is designed to keep maintenance costs to a minimum and reduce labour head count, which is why you also have the option to have an integrated label applicator and printer on the machine where the machine can apply labels and print on the film while packaging, which means all this can be done at once, rather than by manual labour further down the line.

Even the compressor providing the air supply, the ‘lazy susan’ rotary table and the packing rack is integrated into the lifting chassis base frame so that the whole packing line can be easily lifted and moved around as one piece. Growers are already seeing a massive increase in efficiencies and huge savings in costs.

FLOW-PACK MACHINE

Redpack Packaging Machinery® are the number one solution provider in the flow wrapping and product conveying business. Covering a wide range of industries from fresh produce to cosmetics, bakery products, greeting cards, gifts, toys, household products and many more.
